Kaffee Klatsch: (n) German origin, translated "coffee gossip", often meaning "an informal gathering including coffee."

COFFEE FUN FACTS

You can OVERDOSE
on coffee!
(BUT IT WOULD TAKE ABOUT 30 CUPS.)

AMERICANS spend on average $1,092
per year on COFFEE
THAT TRANSLATES
TO $20/WEEK.

Hawaii & California
are the only two US states currently growing coffee from seed. (One farm is in VENTURA!)

Coffee beans
ARE ACTUALLY
the SEEDS of a FRUIT

COFFEE GROUNDS make a great exfoliator.

Legend has it that coffee was discovered by 9th century goat herder who observed their goats eating the fruit
of the coffea plant,
then getting a little...

HYPER

The two most expensive

coffees are made from partially digested beans found in the feces of elephants and the Asian palm civet (a cat-like creature living in Asian jungles.)

IF YOU MUST TRY IT,

QUICK GUIDE TO COFFEE WAVES

Coffee trends are defined as waves. Here are ways folks have experienced a cuppa over the years.

First Wave: (1800s–1960ish)

- Commodity coffee.
- Coffee grows in popularity to become a standard household product.
- Convenience is most important, mostly sold pre-ground.
- Characteristic brands were Folgers and Maxwell House.

Second Wave: (1966–2000)

- Coffeehouse culture.
- Generally characterized by huge brands/chains like Starbucks and Peet's Coffee.
- Focus is on specialty drinks with espresso and on the experience of "getting coffee."
- Sourcing is mentioned but not emphasized.

Third wave: (1990s–present)

"The third wave is, in many ways, a reaction. It is just as much a reply to bad coffee as it is a movement toward good coffee."

—Trish R. Skeie

- Craft coffee renaissance.
- Artisan coffee and origin countries become huge focus and birth the rise of fair-trade and single-origin beans.
- Beans are roasted in various ways to produce flavor notes, often sold as whole beans.
- New methods of brewing become popular (pour-over, French press, cold brew).

Fourth Wave: (mid 2010s–present)

- The science of coffee.
- Focus shifts to chemistry of water and coffee, looking at how to produce the best coffee experience with specialty equipment and precise measurements.
- Coffee as obsession.
- Sustainability and sourcing still strong focus.
